Production history

The Rachel Perkins Collection 2008 was donated to AIATSIS under the Cultural Gifts Program on 30 June 2007 and was endorsed by the Chair of the Committee on Taxation Incentives for the Arts at its meeting of 26 June 2008.

The works and materials included in the Rachel Perkins Collection 2008 are projects which Rachel Perkins has been directly involved in spanning the last 19 years. The materials include complete programs, rushes comprising film, video and sound, costume items and props, multiple drafts of scripts, diaries, press materials and stills. They also include non-broadcast oral history video interviews, filmed with key Elders of the Arrernte people, some of whom are members of Rachel Perkins' direct family.

The Rachel Perkins Collection 2008 also includes Rachel Perkins' papers relating to the development of the Indigenous film industry over the last ten years including the National Indigenous Media Association, the formation of Indigenous Screen Australia and the National Indigenous Television Service. Additional screen works are included, that do not directly relate to Perkins' work, which have been collected by her from the Indigenous industry locally, on a range of formats. These were deposited as they are relevant to the development of the Indigenous screen sector.

[Synopsis from Australian Screen review] One Night the Moon is a film based on events that took place in 1932, about a young girl who goes missing on the night of a full moon. Her family, though desperate to find her, fail to employ the skill of a local tracker Albert Riley (Kelton Pell) due to their own racism. A unique film in combining music and drama, this film was awarded two AFI awards and the Golden AWGIE for best script. It was screened on ABC television and had a small theatrical release in Australia. It premiered at the Sundance Film festival and also screened in New York and at the Moscow film festival amongst various others.
