The materials include complete programs, rushes comprising film, video and sound, costume items and props, multiple drafts of scripts, diaries, press materials and stills. They also include non-broadcast oral history video interviews, filmed with key Elders of the Arrernte people, some of whom are members of Rachel Perkins' direct family.

The Rachel Perkins Collection 2008 also includes Rachel Perkins' papers relating to the development of the Indigenous film industry over the last ten years including the National Indigenous Media Association, the formation of Indigenous Screen Australia and the National Indigenous Television Service. Additional screen works are included, that do not directly relate to Perkins' work, which have been collected by her from the Indigenous industry locally, on a range of formats. These were deposited as they are relevant to the development of the Indigenous screen sector.

as relating to the Indigenous film industry over the last few years. The collection includes documentaries, drama, video clips and sitcoms.
