Publication date: 2014
Annotation: "Uncle Lewis O'Brien, Kaurna elder and Chief Investigator of the Australian Research Council (ARC) project 'Indigenous Knowledge: Water Sustainability and Wild Fire Mitigation', is 'yarning' or in conversation with Irene Watson. The ARC project is working towards positioning an Indigenous philosophical standpoint that will bring a greater focus to Indigenous understandings of our natural world and the relationship between humans and the natural world, particularly in an era of climate change. In this conversation Uncle Lewis O'Brien points to the limitations of Western understandings of environmental..."
management and in particular the prevention of bushfires from an Indigenous knowledges standpoint. It is a conversation about the philosophical positions Indigenous peoples have also deployed in our struggle to outlive colonialism, while also remaining open to sharing Indigenous knowledges that have been shared amongst First Nations for thousands of years” [author's abstract]

Title: Significant tree legislation in South Australia / Suzi Hutchings

Publication date: 2014

Annotation: “Adelaide, the capital city of South Australia, is experiencing dramatic changes to planning legislation in anticipation of increased population growth as a result of its bid to develop a world-class city. The Kaurna, as the traditional owners, have largely been ignored in consultations over proposed changes. Indeed, the push for development reinforces the next chapter of a colonial project, legitimating a discourse of terra nullius for Kaurna and largely thwarting their native title aspirations. In this article, I discuss how the push to modernize Adelaide and satellite centres hides a reinvigoration of the colonists’ fear of the bush and a desire to impose order and civilization through the built environment. Significant trees have become sites of contested identity within Aboriginal and colonial relationships as pressures for the expansion of the city and suburbs drive changes to regulations protecting trees at the expense of environmental concerns and the protection of wildlife” [author's abstract] details history of colonisation of Adelaide and South Australia

Title: They came, they heard, they documented: the Dresden missionaries as lexicographers /cRob Amery and Mary-Anne Gale
Physical descrip: 9 pages ; 30 cm.
Annotation: "Amongst the earliest observers of Aboriginal languages in South Australia were three German missionaries, Clamor Sch*urmann, Christian Teichelmann and Eduard Meyer of the Dresden Mission Society. Their work on the Kaurna, Barngarla and Ngarrindjeri languages is superior to that of their contemporaries, both in terms of quantity and quality. Despite some obvious shortcomings, especially in relation to their documentation of nature, they succeeded, where others failed, to document in detail some of the complexities of these languages such as kinship systems and the functional properties of words. Their mission to impart the word of God led them to consider the inner world of Aboriginal peoples and to document their ways of thinking and behaving . Without the work of the Dresden missionaries our knowledge of these languages would be greatly diminished. Current language revival efforts in these three languages are considerably enhanced by their records. In fact, little would be possible in Barngarla and Kaurna without their work." -- [From Abstract]

Title: Cycling for culture
Publication info: 2014
Physical descrip: 1 online resource (website)
Abstract: This web site is dedicated to 'Cycling for Culture', a unique blend of cycling, Aboriginal cultural experience and fundraising. Held for the first time in 2013, the inaugural event was a three day ride through Kaurna Country or in Kaurna language: ?Maityuwampidlu Kaurna yarta-arra?; the the term Maityuwampi meaning ?bicycle?. Riders involved visit sites of significance for the Kaurna, Peramangk and Ngadjuri people and discover a part of the history of a place that most of us would know as the Adelaide Hills, Barossa Valley and northern metropolitan Adelaide. Participants listen to Elders? story-telling, experience cultural practices, learn language and gain a better understanding of the lives of the people past and present. Cycling for Culture aims to enable a better understanding between Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal people and a greater appreciation for culture, country and history. Riders involved raise funds to support the development of the Kaurna language and to assist in developing resources and training Kaurna language teachers, so that future generations are able to learn their language as an important part of their culture. This website includes learning resources on the Kaurna language, historic information and external link to resources and news updates.

Physical descrip: v. : ill., facsims., ports. ; 25 cm.
ISBN: 0959808310 (v. 1)
Annotation: Chapter 1 -- cites 2 paragraphs from "The National Parks of South Australia" (publ. by the Commissioners of the Park., 1909). The first paragraph concerns the use of Aboriginal names originally given to gullies and ridges in the park, some now superceded by "settlers" " ascribed names. A list of 11 Aboriginal names used in the park's nomenclature taken from this publication is appended. The other paragraph is a brief statement concerning the lost Adelaide Tribe. Book also contains brief anecdote on p. 77 of Aboriginal people having lived in Belair Park, half way between Western Lodge and Belair Station.
