Hello Kids,

Each month I see reports about all the things that Aboriginal people are doing in the community, and each month they seem to have been more active than the one before.

Recently several children were awarded bursaries and scholarships to help them further their studies, and others were acknowledged as leaders in several sports. Others took their part in community service projects such as learn-to-swim campaigns; some joined with whites to help build houses for needy Aboriginal families. And this month Charles Perkins became the first Aboriginal to graduate from a University.

But they all have something in common—they work hard in their chosen field, and they are interested in the community around them.

This year, try to follow their lead. If you do, you’ll be surprised how worthwhile 1966 turns out to be.

'Bye for now kids,
See you next month,

Pete
