SILVERTON

Silverton, the original site of the city now known as Broken Hill, is located about 15 miles from the present day mining town.

All that remains on this site today are a post office and some stone cottages scattered about the old railway line.

The families pictured here were living in the abandoned cottages when the photos were taken in March.