Biographical indexes and dictionaries

An index is a detailed alphabetical guide to names, places or topics, with a reference to where the information can be found. Indexes don’t contain actual information, though they might include a summary.

A biographical index is a list of people’s names and the location (e.g. page numbers and library catalogue numbers) of the information about them.

There are a number of useful biographical indexes of Aboriginal people. Some are searchable online, others are managed by archives and you will need to contact the archives to request a search of the index.

- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Biographical Index – AIATSIS

- INFOKOORI Australian Indigenous Index – State Library of New South Wales

- Bringing Them Home Name Index – National Archives of Australia

- Indigenous indexes – Queensland State Archives

- Aboriginal Information Management System (AIMS)– State Records of SA

Biographical dictionaries are alphabetically indexed lists of people containing information about their lives.

For example, the Dictionaries of Western Australians was a major project that includes four volumes about Aboriginal people. Names were taken from the records of the Colonial Secretary’s Office, private journals, newspapers and published journals. For example, the names and details of Aboriginal people imprisoned on Rottnest Island are listed.

You can find other biographical dictionaries through a search in Trove. https://trove.nla.gov.au/

Census records

Aboriginal people were counted in some early censuses of the Australian population, but were deliberately excluded from others. Section 127 of the Constitution Act 1900 stated that ‘Aboriginal natives shall not be counted’, but exclusion also occurred in earlier censuses. It was not until the 1967 Referendum that Aboriginal people were officially included in the census.

The way in which the government defined Aboriginality varied over time. This meant that an Aboriginal person of mixed ancestry might have been counted in one census and excluded from others.

Some census records therefore include information about Aboriginal people. In New South Wales, for example, the 1891 and 1901 Census collectors’ books list the names of householders and the number of Aboriginal people living in each household.

Local history collections in public libraries and local museums

Many local public libraries in suburbs and towns collect books, photographs, maps, letters and newspapers about their local area as part of their local history collection. Many towns also have small local museums. These collections can be useful to Aboriginal researchers because they might have records of local properties listing Aboriginal stock workers, local newspapers, family diaries and photographs.

A number of websites maintain lists of family history and historical societies including:

- The Federation of Australian Historical Societies - https://www.history.org.au/

Genealogical Societies

Genealogical Societies in each state and territory can be sources of information. They have good collections of genealogical books as well as many records in hard copy, on microfiche, and microfilm as well as online. Many have created online indexes and databases related to various types of records. Genealogical societies are usually staffed by experienced volunteers who can offer advice about research.

Land council records

Your local land council or other Aboriginal organisation (such as cultural and arts groups, training institutes, medical and legal services) might have their own resource collections. They might hold books, pamphlets and newsletters about local events and people, as well as language group information and historical information. To find land councils in your area do a google search with ‘land council’ and your state territory, area or town. You can find information about Aboriginal organisations on the website of the Office of the Registrar of Indigenous Corporations website – www.oric.gov.au  Some Aboriginal communities have organised their own family history groups and work together recording oral histories and writing community histories.
Union, company and employment records

The Noel Butlin Archives Centre - http://www.archives.anu.edu.au/collections centre at the Australian National University collects business and labour records from Australian companies, trade unions, industry bodies and professional organisations. Its collection includes records of trade unions and pastoral properties. If your ancestor worked on a station or in a particular industry, it is possible you might find some information about them in these records.
